Penny Black on an Envelope Contrary to Regulations

Envelope with original letter inside posted on Thursday the 24th of September 1840 in Manchester to Regents Park London.

Penny Black Plate 4 placed on the bottom left of the entire Post Office regulations says the stamp must be on the top right corner.

This letter written Edwin Atherstones provides a day-to-day account of his business trip to his daughter Mary Elizabeth who went on to publish and edit a distinguished book named The Dramatic works of Edwin Atherstone. Mary Elizabeth who went on to publish and edit a distinguished book named:

The Dramatic works of Edwin Atherstone.

Edwin Atherstone was a poet but also supported his family by dealing in Art. He was born in Nottingham in 1788 and was one of 15 children.

He is described by his daughter Mary 'as a man of most honourable, noble mind and heart'.

Atherstone was friend to the great John Martin, who has been referred to as the most popular painter of his day. Martin supplied art for Atherstone's work such as 'the fall of the Nineveh', of which is now part of the British Museums collection; and the famous poem 'A Midsummer's Day Dream'.

Atherstone was in the same literary circle as like likes of Charles Dickens, John Hunt and William Godwin (the father of Mary Shelley). Thus, subsequently their work was part of the Romantic Movement which marked an era of change for England.
