The minerals on this page are sources of the metals Nickel, Tin, Titanium and Tantalum. Copper Nickel is nickel arsenide (contains no copper!) and Cassiterite (tin oxide) is the predominant ore of tin (and is also known as "tinstone"). The chief ore of Tantalum is Tantalite, comprising the tantalite salts of iron and manganese. Three titanium oxide minerals, Anatase, Brookite and Rutile are the chief sources of Titanium metal.

BRITISH POSTAGE STAMP DESIGN

Early Symbols & Emblems

If one was to take the Heraldic diamond shaped stamps above and bisect them horizontally (as they were actually done in postal use) the resultant stamp is triangular – and that is just what Perkins Bacon did with the 3d denomination of the Newfoundland Heraldic series of 1857. In this triangular design the lettering of NEWFOUNDLAND could be fitted comfortably along the longer edges and the heraldic flowers placed in the centre of the triangle.

There was a famous precedent for this shape in the Cape of Good Hope Triangular of 1853. This stamp featured the allegorical figure of Hope (with anchor), a symbol of the Cape since 1715. Another engraving masterpiece by William Humphrys at Perkins Bacon, this series of triangular stamps is one of the most popularly sought among collectors worldwide.

Trinidad was in 1851 the first of the West Indian colonies to issue a postage stamp. The design featured Britannia seated with her shield and spear alongside bags of sugar (representing the commerce of the colonies) on the left, and a barque rigged sailing ship on the right. In the first issues there were no values on the stamps as the colour of the stamps served to indicate its denomination to the islanders. This design was then adopted by Barbados in 1858 and Mauritius in 1859.

In a rare move away from Perkins Bacon, the first stamps for British Guiana were designed and lithograph (surface) printed by London banknote printers Waterlow & Sons. These stamps displayed the complete badge of the colony and are considered superb examples of both design and printing.

Welcome to our Summer Sale, featuring a broad and specialised selection of stamps, coins, postcards, banknotes and collectables.

This sale includes the stamp collection formed by the late Richard Robbins, a close friend of T&T Auctions who worked with us for many years and is remembered with great affection. Richard was a keen and knowledgeable collector, with particular strength in European countries, carefully collected and arranged by country, together with a fine range of British Commonwealth material, especially South Atlantic issues.

The collection reflects Richard's enthusiasm, knowledge and many years of dedicated collecting. We hope it will give fellow collectors as much enjoyment as it gave him. All lots from the Richard Robbins Collection are identified in the catalogue by the suffix "ex RR".

Newfoundland also turned to the USA for the 1865 set of six stamps. These featured three portraits, Prince Albert and two different of Q. Victoria. The other three designs depict local icons codfish, a schooner and a seal (albeit with the feet drawn wrong!). The 12c Q. Victoria portrait was based on the GB Wyon head whereas the 24c stamp used the Chalon head.

SIERRA LEONE ADHESIVE POSTAGE STAMPS 1859-1956

In 1872 the need for a wider range of postal denominations led to the introduction of a series of De la Rue Key Plate stamps, involving a two-step printing process using a Key Plate (frame and portrait) and a Duty Plate (country and value). Each denomination was printed in a single colour.

Between 1872 and 1876 seven denominations were introduced:

In January of 1879 Sierra Leone joined the Universal Postal Union. The UPU had established guidelines for standardized colors for each postal rate. The Crown Agents thus decided to standardize colours for the colonial stamps that would fall within the guidelines of the UPU.

In 1884 the Key Plate stamps were re-issued in the UPU colours:

SIERRA LEONE ADHESIVE POSTAGE STAMPS 1859-1956

In 1932 Sierra Leone followed a number of other British colonies and introduced its first pictorial issue. This comprised a set of 13 values with a single scene of palm and cola trees and was designed and printed by Waterlow, a departure by Sierra Leone from De la Rue after 73 years.
